

Secular prayer

The power of prayer is ubiquitous, it is a miracle worker and always has been. Prayer gives the power to effect changes. It has worked all through history and permeates every population on this planet. Every religion has prayer; either formally, informally or as meditation or even as all three. Prayer success is defined here as any seemingly serendipitous happening that is not physically brought about by the sweat of brow. Actually at the core prayer is a secular process that might be more neutrally described as remote controlled intentionality. While religious minded people will argue that prayers can only be answered by their god, the root process works irrespective of the deity evoked and equally well with no deity whatever involved. Prayer is the word adopted here from religious practice and used because this will allow the most people possible to understand the processes involved. Secular prayer or just the word prayer is used here for the core process where no religious deity is invoked. This is the process that is explored.

Secular prayer is forming a desire for something, voicing that desire, and then following up with the right thoughts, attitudes and actions to make the desire a materialized reality. The effective rules of conduct for successful prayer are set out here. Mother Nature is neutral, it is not for you nor is it against you. By its nature it will grant you anything you want and in great abundance if you only ask for it. Why? Because there is no reason for it not to follow the Law of Attraction of Alikes once the process is properly started. The process can be called distant mental intervention or any other neutral name but it is all the same thing.

Anything is possible through prayer. Results can come easily, especially when using the right techniques. It is just that some things are easier to accomplish than others so that sometimes the approach to be used has to be thought out to compensate for personal inabilities. Forethought and planning will then need to be given to achieving the final desired outcome. A weight lifter at a competition is expected to lift the weight all by himself. At some point during the competition the weight becomes so great that no competitor can now lift it. Others, who set up the weights to be lifted, take the easy route. They carry over limitations as to what you can accomplish with one lift, but if your objective is to have the weights moved, there is more than one way to accomplish the final result. Faith can move mountains, just not all at once under most practical circumstances.

Prayer is seen as a miracle worker because even if very poorly performed it can still create effective results, but only as a serendipitous hit or miss proposition. If the propitious practices that follow seem complicated, involved and convoluted to you, it cannot be helped. Who ever said that everything in life has to be simple? Ask yourself, is continued living with my problems really better than a little effort to cure them? This is what reality is and life cannot be reverted to a simplified form just because some people are seeking an easy answer. Life and its exigencies are what is, not necessarily what someone would like them to be.
